HeadWaters Welcomes the Luneack Preserve

HeadWaters is happy to announce the acquisition of our latest preserve! On October 20, 2017 we officially acquired The Luneack Preserve from The Nature Conservancy. This new preserve is 574-acres and is located in Section 28 of Clinton Township in Oscoda County.

On this property you can find Little Ward Lake and the northernmost portion of Big Ward Lake, plus a variety of wetland types, and mature oak forests with regenerating pine. We think this property is important because of these unique natural communities, the plants and animals they support, and the various benefits natural land provide, including water quality protection and opportunities for recreation. At this time, our plan for the Luneack Preserve is to allow deer hunting with a permit and a limited number of public events such as educational hikes, bird watching, and tree planting. Keep your eyes open for upcoming events at this new addition to our protected land.

Not sure what to get someone on your list? Make a donation to HWLC in their honor this holiday season.
